Resolution:	Fixed

Description

The YARD rake file is not yet updated to match the current (Redmine 2.x) locations of plugins, which causes two issues:

1. yard is parsing test files of core plugins, while it shouldn't
2. yard is not parsing regular files of third-party plugins, while it should

The first issue is being caused by `source:/trunk/lib/tasks/yardoc.rake#L5` which adds `lib//*.rb` to files. After r9533 Rails plugins required by the core are located in `lib/plugins` instead of `vendor/plugins`, so they are now going to be parsed by yard already through `source:/trunk/lib/tasks/yardoc.rake#L5`, instead of being added through `source:/trunk/lib/tasks/yardoc.rake#L6` which does have the exclusion regex for test files.

The second issue is being caused by `source:/trunk/lib/tasks/yardoc.rake#L6` which is still expecting plugins to reside in `vendor/plugins` instead of `plugins` (pre r9503).

The following patch should fix both of the above mentioned issues:

Note: this patch will also make yard to exclude test files under other directories in `lib` besides `lib/plugins`, but:

- quick-scan: there are none...
- if there will be some it doesn't really matter in my opinion, because test files should not be parsed by yard in general (read: while being invoked using the rake file that is provided by Redmine)

@Jean-Baptiste:

Nice to see you are merging-in some patches ;) Can you maybe take a look at this patch also? It seems to me a small change, which doesn't break anything...

Thanks in advance, Mischa.

Edit: below a more concise iteration of the patch, rebased on current trunk (r13364):

No problem Mischa, done in r13365/r13366. I removed the comment which was trivial imho. Thanks!
