Description
For some API use cases, it will certainly be helpful to find out which modules are enabled in a project. It is at least for a new feature we're developing at Planio. But in general, every API client which uses - let's say the issues API - should be able to check beforehand, if the issue tracking module is active in a particular project or not. This patch adds <code>enabled_modules</code> to the <code>projects#show</code> API. They will be shown only if the <code>include=enabled_modules</code> URL parameter is used. The behaviour is exactly the same as for issue categories and trackers. And while we're at it, it also makes the <code>include=...</code> URL parameters (for issue categories, trackers and enabled modules) available in the <code>projects#index</code> API. Tests are included, only needs merging :)
