Description
This patch converts the previous and next month links in the calendars view into buttons in the new pagination style. It also aligns the buttons vertically with the input fields on the left.

- Subject changed from Use the new pagination style for the calendars view. to Use the new pagination style for the calendars view

- Category changed from UI to Calendar

- Target version set to 4.1.0

It looks nice and improves the consistency of UI. I am setting target version to 4.1.0.

Thank you for posting the patch.

This is another small change that can be included in 4.0.0.

I have not committed this patch because this patch changes a style ".buttons". The change influences all pages which use the class, not only the calendar page.

Oh, I need to admit that I didn't see that change.

I'm currently on the road but I can have a look at the patch on Sunday.
At a first glance I think the new styles came into the patch by accident.

Ok, I've looked at the patch and the style changes for the 'buttons' class are necessary to get the new buttons for previous and next month in line with the form controls on the left.
After nearly a year passed by since I've submitted this patch I don't think it's the right solution anymore and I'll submit a better one for 4.1.0.

I slightly updated the patch. The new patch addresses the above point by setting margin-top against .controller-calendars p.buttons instead of p.buttons.

Setting the target version to 5.1.0.
