Description
Currently, you can set a default spent time activity for all users, regardless their role. I find it more useful if we add a default activity for each role (and not for each user how is requested in #938) because an user can have different roles per projects. Maybe in one project I'm a developer and I want to have the "Development" activity as default, and in another project I've the "Manager" role and I want to have the "Project Management" activity as default. If a role doesn't have a default activity, the global should be set as default if exists, otherwise blank. Any feedback is welcome.

This could really save time for many people and makes time tracking less tedious.

I am using redmine 3.4.6. on bitnami, I apply the patch in the directory htdoc but once I redemare the service, access to the menu role hangs, I need this feature and thank you

#8 - 2018-12-05 20:44 - Gerardo Schild

I am using redmine 3.4.6 on bitnami, although the patch did not work, I applied the changes manually and I had the following error, which should be corrected for the patch

```
\app\models\time_entry_activity.rb
```

I get the error of: undefined function punk which solves it with .sort.map(&:default_time_entry_activity_id)

Thank you!
