Hi there, I wrote a plugin which extends original issues' features with following: <ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>- Leave a parent issue's journal when a parent issue's attributes are updated by modification of it's child issue(s).</li></ul> Written for Redmine 4.1. If this UX is built in to original Redmine, I'm happy!

The same feature is going to be available in the upcoming Redmine 5.0.0. See #6033 for details.

Thank you for suggesting the improvement.

I think Toru's feature request is a different than the changes made in #6033 which only shows the addition or removal of subtasks.

As I understand this here description the plugin Toru attached adds a journal entry if a subtask changes an attribute of the parent issue. So for example if the due date of the parent issue gets changed by setting the due date a subtask which I think is pretty neat because it makes the behavior of issues which contain subtasks very comprehensible.

Thanks. Neat, good word.

I will resign current 32 years of employment as of July 15th and be a freelancer. Suppose I can dedicate some of my rest of time to this project. I will make this plugin as a patch for the first hand.
