Description

The theme installation directory was changed from public/themes to themes in Redmine 6.0.0.

The attached patch prevents Redmine from starting if themes are still installed in the deprecated public/themes directory. This ensures that system administrators are prompted to move themes to the correct directory.

A similar mechanism was implemented when the plugins directory was changed from vendor/plugins to plugins (see r9600).

Yes, if possible. This prevents confusion for those who do not know that the theme installation directory has changed.

Yes, it is, can you integrate the fix?
