Description
This patch improves the error message displayed when attempting to delete a tracker in use.
Currently, all projects using the tracker are linked in the error message, even if the tracker is disabled for a project, leading to an incorrect issues list. This can lead to incorrect issue lists because when the tracker is disabled for a project, the issues list cannot be filtered to show issues associated with that tracker.
In the suggested fix, if the tracker is disabled, the project name is displayed as plain text instead of a link.

I have updated the patch to take rolled-up trackers into account.

The updated patch now also displays a link to the issues list when the tracker is rolled up from subprojects.

- Resolution set to Invalid

I mistakenly stated that an incorrect issues list would be displayed, but that was a misunderstanding. Therefore, I will withdraw this patch.

If the tracker to be deleted is not enabled in a project, the filters section at the top of the issues list may appear to have a different tracker selected. However, the issues list itself is displayed correctly.
