Description

Currently I use a master project with many subprojects to track multiple streams in a project. I do not want issues to be entered in the master project, and disabled all the trackers. Now I get the error "No tracker is associated to this project. Please check the Project settings".

When I click New Issue from the menu. I would rather hide the menu item "New Issue" if no trackers are selected in "Settings". In such case, I will be able to roll up the issues to master project, and the menu bar will look much cleaner.

Well, that would cost one more SQL query to display the menu...
