Description
Hi, Currently in redmine I grant a role only with the option to globally view tickets and globally edit tickets or not at all. I think it is very important to add a feature that allows users that have a certain role to view and edit only their tickets. Thanks, Alexander

It would be very useful feature for us too. What do developers think? Is it feasible to implement it given the current architecture of redmine?

Yeah, quite similar although this one is narrower. I must say, it was not an easy job to follow all that lengthy discussion.

If there is a consensus #337 would be implemented in redmine-1.1, I guess this feature is a duplicate and should be closed.

Implemented by #7412 as Bruce Svare pointed out.

I close this issue.

I don't think this is OP wanted.

Visibility only control the 'view' permission of issues, but system still lacks another function -- edit permission. Users should edit only their raised tickets, I mean issue properties.

I think it is duplicate of #5195.
