Description

I think that viewing journal count is better than nothing.
Because it is easy to understand issues's activity.
so I make this patch.

I think it would be much more efficient if a cache column was added on the issues table (eg. journals_count).

So sorry, answer too late.
I agree your suggestion.

If column add on the issues table, it was following effect.

- decrease unnecessary query (related journal select)
- more clear design

Well, this would be nice to have. Sometimes it helps to find "hot-topics" by ordering journal_count descending.

But I agree, a fixed column, which is just updated everytime a new note is added, would be much more efficient than calculating this value each time the list is displayed. :-)

We should count only the journals with notes? or all journals?

I think it should be the number of all journals.

Activities such as adding attachments without note and changing the target version are also important information to see the issue's activity.
