Description

It would be nice to have permission options to set who can see the members assigned to a project (in project overview).
Ideally this isn't a on/off toggle but being able to select the roles.
Examples:

- project admins and project managers can see all members
- simple users only see the project admins
- non-members (on public projects) can't see any members.

I forgot - above patch needs database migrate:

rake db:migrate RAILS_ENV=production

This will only reach trunk if you add some tests

+1 this is important feature, if for example company has lot's of users, and 1 product that all of them use. In some cases, users (Customer role for example) shouldn't know who other users are. Currently they are using workarounds... Additionals plugin is offering to hide other users of the same role, but there should also be ability to hide all users (except the ones working on issue).

+1, I agree with @Aleksander Pavic.
